Two from 'Class of 2014' earn top college spots

Sufia Mehmood gets ready to move to Harvard; Kevin Burkes is also flying pretty high

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

From the Class of 2014 at River City High School, one pair of graduates in particular stands out for where they're going next.

Kevin Burkes is on the path to the U.S. Air Force Academy and a potential commission as an officer and possible fighter pilot, while classmate Sufia Mehmood is headed to Harvard on a full-ride scholarship.

SUFIA MEHMOOD
She applied to Harvard never thinking she might actually get in. She got a full scholarship.
(News-Ledger photo)

Sufia, still 17 years old for a few more months, talks about her upcoming college years with both laughter and some trepidation. She earned a GPA of well over 4.0 in high school. But wasn't aware of anyone else from her school who has ever earned a spot at Harvard, and this girl from Broderick didn't think she had a chance either.

"I had never even thought of applying to an Ivy League school," explained Sufia. "I come from a school with a high drop-out rate. I kind of applied to a couple of Ivy League schools just on a bet."

"Myself and a couple of other friends just applied, never expecting to get in," she added. "I visited Harvard only once, because it's so far away. I went to Princeton, I went to Yale, I went to Harvard. I actually liked the atmosphere of Harvard better – not because the other schools weren't amazing as well, just because I thought Harvard was a better fit for me because of the atmosphere. It's not urban. It's in Cambridge, not (nearby) Boston."

Harvard receives applications from a lot of the world's top students. It accepts only five percent of them, she said. But Sufia was stunned not to get not only an admission letter, but an offer of a "full ride."

"If I did not get the scholarship, I would not be able to go at all," she said.

In addition to the Harvard scholarship, the graduating senior received another $100,000 or so in other scholarships -- much of which she will defer to later, to help out in medical school.

The money included $40,000 from the national organization of Elks lodges (the top prize after first winning a local Elks chapter contest), $20,000 from the Dell computer corpoation and more.

Sufia's high school years were filled with classwork along with membership in math and science clubs, scholarship organizations and a student volunteer club.

Is she more of a math and science person, then?

"I am," answered Sufia. "I have to say I prefer it over English."

Going into college, she has declared a major of neurobiology.

"I want to become a pediatric oncologist (children's cancer doctor)," she reports. I am most interested in brain science."

Sufia played competitive tennis her freshman year at RCHS, and then switched to recreational play. She's been a hospital volunteer, too.

"I've been at the UCD Medical Center the past two years – I've been in the trauma center, E.R., oncology department, I go where they need me. They'll have me go to the blood bank, or I can feed patients or help with IDs or bandage-changing."

Sufia, who has three younger brothers. She also said that a lot of people for helping her on her journey through RCHS, including her parents.

"My family has definitely been supportive," said Sufia. "Mrs. (Susan) Smith has been my 10th and 12th grade teacher and also my AVID teacher the past four years," she said, singling out one member of the faculty. "All the teachers and counselors have definitely helped me. I strongly believe that each person makes an impact, no matter how small."

Sufia trades Broderick for New England in August.

Harvard University is located in Cambridge, Massachusetts – just across the river from Boston. Sufia said she is excited, as well as a bit nervous, about her new school, its climate and its culture.

For graduating senior Kevin Burkes, it's one step towards fulfillment of a long-time dream. After building a record on the football field and in the classroom at River City High School, and receiving a nomination from Congresswoman Doris Matsui, Burkes is on his way to the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

KEVIN BURKES

It's a rare thing for a River City Raider to make it to one of the nation's military academies.

"Since I was a young kid, that was my dream school to go to," he told the News-Ledger. "I have always been interested in planes, and always wanted to fly. The Air Force Academy was a place my dad showed me as a boy. And I always wanted to join something greater than myself."

Kevin lives in Southport with his dad and stepmom. He has four brothers and

Two new factories:

West Sacramento hosts a pair of "new factory" events just over 48 hours apart this week. They're each within what local officials call the city's mission as a "food hub."

Monday morning, Shinmei U.S.A. corporation broke ground on its first production facility in the U.S. – a 28,000 square foot plant to manufacture gluten-free rice buns from local product.

The plant is located in Southport Business Park at 3015 Ramco Street, near Southport Parkway.

Shinmei plans to make rice bun products certified for organic, kosher and halal labels. Its representatives say that it will house up to 150 employees when it finishes its four planned stages of growth.

West Sacramento's proximity to the rice industry and the quality of its municipal water were both important to Shinmei's choice of the city for the new factory.

This afternoon, city officials and media will join a tour at the new TOMRA sorting plant, 875 Embarcadero Drive in West Sacramento. The company's Norwegian CEO, Stefan Ranstrand, and other officials will be on hand for a ribbon-cutting.

The company "serves growers, packers and processers for the fresh and processed food industries, locally and globally," reports spokesperson Kathleen Chance.

The new West Sacramento plant is 18,0000 square feet larger than TOMRA's previous facility, and will contain R&D labs and a test and demonstration center.

Assembly race, a top tower & teachers in trouble

News briefs from West Sacramento and the region:

Following an unsuccessful primary election in the State Assembly race, West Sacramento city councilman Mark Johannessen has thrown his support to formal rival Steve Cohn, a fellow Democrat and a member of the city council in Sacramento.

Cohn and Kevin McCarty (also a Democrat and a Sacramento city council member) will face off for the District 7 runoff in November.

Cohn was scheduled to be at the West Sacramento Farmers Market last Thursday, greeting local voters alongside Johannessen, West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon, city councilmen Bill Kristoff and Chris Ledesma, Yolo County Supervisor Oscar Villegas (from West Sacramento) and former supervisor Mike McGowan of West Sacramento, according to Cohn's office.

The West Sacramento waterfront tower of the California State Teachers Retirement System (CalSTRS) has won a "TOBY Award" from The Building Owners and Managers Association in the Pacific Southwest region. The region includes California, Nevada, Hawaii and greater Phoenix.

CalSTRS building under construction in 2008
(News-Ledger photo)

The 2009 building is certified by the U.S. Green Building Council as "LEED Platinum," reaching the highest level of sustainable construction. The 13-story tower houses the member services center and administration for the retirement system, reports CalSTRS.

A pair of teachers are in legal trouble in separate incidents.

Media reports say Wesley Cuong Trang was arrested after a Saturday night driving incident in Sacramento in which his car allegedly hit several bicyclists. The incident on L Street happened after Trang apparently had a confrontation with cyclists while he was changing a flat tire, which Trang believed had been slashed.

Trang is a teacher at the Yolo Education Center (an alternative high school) in West Sacramento.

The event occurred during midtown Sacramento's "Second Saturday" event, which draws many cyclists.

Meanwhile, other media reports say a special education teacher at the Delta Elementary Charter School in Clarksburg faces charges for allegedly stealing students' prescription medications from a locked cabinet on campus, say various media reports.

The teacher is Sheri Laverne Haselhuhn of West Sacramento.

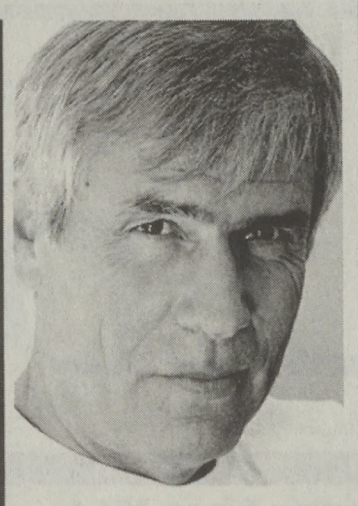
A twenty-dollar putt and a million-dollar smile

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

The older I have gotten, and more importantly the older my children have gotten, the more it has dawned on me that we parents take way too much credit (and give ourselves way too much grief) for the way our kids have turned out. Maybe it's just me, but have you ever noticed that the vast majority of the character traits our children possess were more or less right there for anyone with a perceptive eye to see within the first year or two of their birth? In other words, if you really think back on it, whether your child turned out to be loud or quiet, funny or serious, out-going or introspective, a great joy to be around or a pain in the butt, he or she was pretty much born that way, and our abundance of parenting skills, or complete lack of them, didn't really have all that much to do with it.

So I have come to believe – rather reluctantly actually -- that whether it's us or our children, who we are as persons is greatly determined by the genes that are passed down to us, and not by our environment and the way we are raised. Now that doesn't mean parents don't have any responsibility for how their children turn out, because we can certainly make a lot of difference on the edges, especially when it comes to teaching the difference between right and wrong, and what's important and what isn't in this life. But when push comes to shove, for better or worse, I truly think the genes usually win out.

Now, taking my little theory another step further, it has also dawned on me that these powerful genes we all inherit like to skip generations, maybe even lots of generations. In fact, sometimes I am convinced that if we were able to trace our roots all the way back to the Mayflower or wherever/whoever we come from, there would probably be people looking and acting just like us running around somewhere.

But be that as it may, I can attest from my own experience that genes can most definitely skip at least one generation. For instance, I have often been told that I look and act a lot like my mother's father, who I never actually met because he died the year I was born. And my twin sister has often been compared to my father's mother, in both appearance and character traits. And although none of my four kids look or act much like me (with the possible exception of my daughter), my youngest son is very much like his mother's father, and my oldest son is almost exactly like my father. In fact, he is the same height and weight, has the same nose, mouth, complexion and hair color, and is also very much like him in temperament, especially when it comes to what makes him happy and what makes him sad – which finally brings me to my little story.

For Father's Day, my very thoughtful son-in-law set up a golfing-foursome that included him, me, my younger brother, and my oldest son. Now you would have to know my younger brother and oldest son to know how difficult that was to pull off, so I'm impressed that my son-in-law even made the attempt. They are both what my mother used to call home-bodies, not to mention that golf is not their favorite sport. But once we all got out on the golf course (Wildhorse, out in Davis), the day was so pretty and the company so good that everyone quickly started enjoying themselves. In fact, it even had me remembering the long ago day my brother and I took my father golfing for the one and only time, with him finally asking us, "So why in the world does anyone in their right mind want to spend the better part of a perfectly good day hitting a little ball and then walking all over hell's half-acre trying to find it?" And the more I thought about that decades-ago day, the more I wished my father was still on this earth.

On about the 9th or 10th hole, my oldest son suddenly found himself confronted with a winding, downhill putt that had to be at least 50 feet long. So, knowing he didn't have a chance in heaven of making the putt, I yelled out to him that I would give him $20 if he did. Now $20 may not mean all that much to most people, but to my oldest son, who still has the first dollar he ever earned, it was a pretty big deal, and he definitely wanted that $20 transferred from my wallet to his! So he took plenty of time lining up his putt as the rest of us watched with smiles on our faces, knowing that my money was perfectly safe.

My oldest son suddenly found himself confronted with a winding, downhill putt that had to be at least 50 feet long. So, knowing he didn't have a chance in heaven of making the putt, I yelled out to him that I would give him $20 if he did.

I was standing right behind the hole when my oldest son finally struck his golf ball and I had a really good look at it as it slowly began twisting and turning on its long descent towards me. Wow, I thought to myself, I think he actually has it on the right line. Then, to my amazement, I could tell that his putt also had about the right speed.

"Are you kidding me, that thing has a chance," yelled out my shocked son-in-law.

"It's going to go in!" hollered my brother.

"Oh, no!" I screamed, knowing that I might soon be $20 poorer.

And sure enough, that truly impossible-to-make 50-foot (or longer) putt somehow rolled right into the very heart of the cup and everyone (including me) starting yelling and laughing. And then, when I looked over at my over-joyed son, there, on his face, was the very rarest of all my childhood memories -- the same exact smile that would take over my father's entire face when he was truly happy about something. And for that one very brief and special moment, on a golf course of all places, my dad was alive again on Father's Day!

Letter to the Editor

Change the 'Redskins'!

During the NBA Finals, viewers saw a message sponsored in part by the Yocha Dehe Wintun tribe of Yolo County. The commercial highlights a racial slur that has persisted as the name of a team mascot for over seventy years: "Redskins." For many years, Native Americans, including the National Congress of American Indians, have asked the Washington Redskins to change the name of their mascot. The name "Redskins" has its historical origins in a deplorable history of genocide against Native Americans, including massacres at "Wounded Knee," "Eagle Lake," and "the Trail of Tears." To many Native Americans, "Redskins" is an offensive racial slur in the same manner that the "n" word is offensive to African Americans or the "w" word is offensive to Latinos.

Recently on You Tube, I listened with great admiration to courageous statements from Yocha Dehe Wintun tribal leaders Marshal McKay and James Kinter calling for an end to seventy years of racial slurs by the Washington Redskins. It is appalling that in the wake of the Clippers scandal such racial slurs are not universally condemned.

I see many similarities in the actions of Washington team owner Daniel Snyder and Donald Sterling of the Los Angeles Clippers. I am particularly disturbed that Daniel Snyder defends rather that apologizes for the slurs. Washington Redskins owner Daniel Snyder should put an end to a seventy year old racial slur that has persisted far too long and change the team mascot.

NFL owners should grant Tribal chairman Marshal McKay and Tribal Secretary James Kinter an opportunity to speak to them and make their case for changing the name. If the NBA can force Donald Sterling to sell the Clippers over a racial slur, surely the NFL can require a team owner to cease marketing a racial slur. The NBA permitted Kevin Johnson to address them concerning retention of the Kings. How much more important is it for the NFL to allow tribal leaders to speak to them concerning the eradication of a vestige of racism?

Does he come from a military line?

"In my family, I have an uncle who served in the Air Force," Kevin responded. "My dad served in the Marines, my grandfather served in the Army and my great-grandfather served in the Navy. I'm the first in my family to go to a service academy."

Kevin, 18, played several different sports during his high school career. An outside linebacker for the school's football team, he expects to play ball for the Air Force – where he will try especially hard to beat the Naval Academy from Annapolis, Maryland, and the Army Academy from West Point, New York.

Kevin graduated with a 3.75 grade point average, as well as a record of participation in several extracurricular activities.

"I was part of the Interact Club (a volunteer service group) my sophomore and junior years," he said, "and part of the National Honor Society."

He was also a member of the Air Force JROTC (Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps), which has a program on the River City campus.

Kevin gives credit to the school principal and many others for helping him succeed at RCHS.

"Definitely, my principal, Ms. (Katie) Nemer has been there supporting me," he said. "I wouldn't be able to name all the teachers who helped – most of the teachers have been with me in class, spending time and supporting me if I was struggling."

Successful academy graduates earn an officer's commission as well as a college degree. In return for their schooling and training, graduates are required to serve either six years in active duty (for non-pilots) or ten (for pilots), in addition to time as a reserve officer.

"Hopefully, I will have a career as a fighter pilot," said Kevin, citing one of the most-coveted after Air Force jobs.

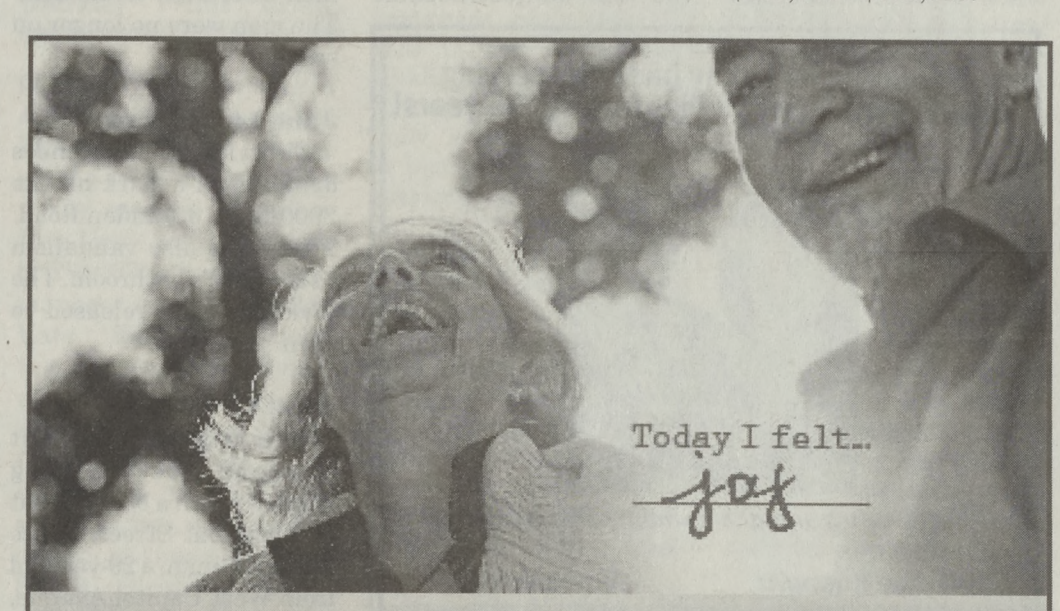
Before entering the Academy, he will spend a year in a an academy prep school. Then he will join the Academy's class of 2019.

Military academies are famous for being especially hard on freshman cadets, with plenty of tough hazing by upperclassmen. At Colorado Springs, for example, freshmen cadets may not wear their backpacks on campus – they must carry them at arm's length. In the dining hall, they must sit on the front third of their chair, and may chew the food only a regulation number of times before swallowing.

And an ornery senior may choose to make their life difficult by, for example, commanding the newer cadet to "drop and give me twenty pushups."

"They can pretty much do that at any time," said Kevin. But he has received some friendly advice from fellow RCHS alumnus Trevor Langford, now heading into his senior year at the Air Force Academy.

"He says freshman year is going to be the hardest year. He says to know that it's all just a game, it's not personal, and to just take it one step at a time."



She loves how he sees the humor in everyday life. She loves he knows when one of his funny stories is just what she needs to hear. She loves that they've been inseparable since he asked her to the high school dance.

At Yolo Hospice, we'll see him through her eyes, and we'll be there with comfort and expert care. Because the care we deliver is about her and him, about what they are to each other, and about helping them live it all more fully.

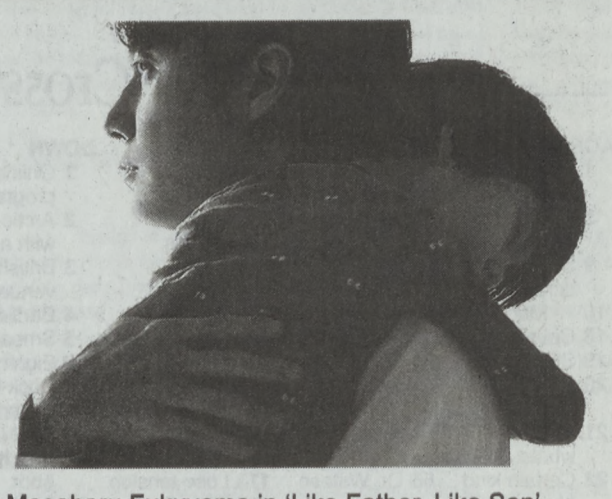
PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Like Father, Like Son" (Unrated) -- A hardworking young couple receive a shock after their son is accepted into an elite school: The boy they have been raising and loving for six years is not their son, but was accidentally switched at birth. While two sets of parents and two young boys are pulled into an emotional situation, the film focuses on one of the fathers. Ryota (Masaharu Fukuyama) realizes that he is rather cold as a father, and his long work hours as an architect don't necessarily make him a great provider for his son, Keita.

This Japanese import draws its premise from real-life events, but comes across as more of an original drama than an adapted story. The movie delicately handles difficult questions about what makes a family, and how do imperfect people make the best decisions for children.



Masaharu Fukuyama in 'Like Father, Like Son'

"A Young Doctor's Notebook" (Mini-series) -- A Russian doctor (Jon Hamm) revisits his old journal and gets pulled back into his early days as an overwhelmed young physician (Daniel Radcliffe) working in a hospital far away from everything. Apparently, practicing medicine in rural Russia around 1917 was a brutal, stomach-twisting business. The doctor's older self (Hamm) has brief but entertaining exchanges with the memory of his helpless younger self (Radcliffe).

A mix of dark comedy and darker drama pervades these few episodes. There's enough dry humor and lower-brow gags to keep you laughing for the entire season. However, there are stretches where it's almost impossible to keep your eyes on the screen: amateur surgery in the early 20th century was a very messy business.

"Afflicted" (R) -- Hey, everyone! Somebody just made a new found-footage horror movie that isn't boring crap! Just when I thought the genre had been picked clean, along comes a little flick about Clif and Derek -- two Canadian pals documenting their yearlong trip around the world. Somewhere along the way, Derek gets attacked while hooking up with a one-night-stand, and he starts displaying odd symptoms. As the duo continue their travels, Derek develops inhuman strength and a weird skin condition. Things escalate viscerally, paying off in a horror flick that makes you best friends with a monster.

"All the Wrong Reasons" (Unrated) -- In a big-box superstore, a dramatic love quadrangle forms among some of the broken young employees. Ascher (the late Corey Monteith of TV's "Glee") is the store manager and husband to Kate (Karine Vanasse), the store's boundary-obsessed security director. Also in the mix: Nicole (Emily Hampshire), a cashier and single-mother who has her eyes on her ambitious young boss, and Simon (Kevin Zeggers), a firefighter who lost a hand and now works as the store's security guard. This isn't exactly a two-for-one bargain of comedy and drama -- more like an off-brand value pack.

"The Pickled Piper" by Mary Ellen Hughes
"Death on Eat Street" by JJ Cook
(Berkley Prime Crime, $7.99 each)
Reviewer: Ealish Waddell

Sometimes there's nothing as tasty as a good cozy mystery, and two recent food-themed titles offer some juicy plots for armchair sleuths to chew on.

The hamlet of Cloverdale seems to have taken a shine to newly transplanted resident Piper Lamb and the homemade concoctions she sells in her shop, Piper's Picklings. But then "The Pickled Piper," aka the town bully, is found dead in Piper Lamb's pickle barrel, and suspicion falls instantly on her assistant's bohemian boyfriend. Piper and her neighbors throw themselves into playing detective, trying to clear his name, but as more townspeople are murdered and attacks of vandalism against Piper herself begin to escalate, she begins to fear that she may be the villain's next target.

In "Death on Eat Street," Zoe Chase finally has taken a giant leap toward her dream of opening her own restaurant, despite the disapproval of her posh parents and sexist ex. For now it's just a dingy diner and a rickety food truck, but she's beginning to make a name in the community with her inventive and addictive biscuit bowls. But when her biggest rival is found murdered in her truck, Zoe finds herself at the center of a tangled criminal investigation involving everyone from a celebrity chef to a former president.

Although one novel is set in a small upstate New York town and the other in the streets of urban Alabama, both of these books are chock full of the spice, salt and interconnectedness of community life, both for good and for bad. Each also centers around a woman trying to reinvent her life in a culinary venture -- and the inclusion of recipes in both is an especially delicious perk.

The Kitchen Diva

By Angela Shelf Medearis

Green Is the New Black

If asked, "What's your favorite veggie?" you might name that inaugural vegetable, likely one of the first you ever tasted, as the winner. You know, the one you had on your plate at least twice a week growing up: green beans!

You might have had them served camo green from a can, or neon bright from a bag ... hanging out with a mix of frozen peas and carrots. Maybe, if you were lucky, it was a pile of fork-tender pods just picked from the garden, cooked with a slab of bacon. Whatever their incarnation, green beans hold a place in both our culinary history and our personal memories that is as indelible as Wednesday-night meatloaf or the annual Thursday Thanksgiving feast. It wasn't kale that Mom bought pureed in a small, fat jar and fed you as your first bites of "real food." It was green beans.

The thing about green beans is that in this age of kohlrabi, chard, sunchokes and celeriac, they seem so ordinary, maybe even a little plain. But that's exactly what we like about green beans, especially these days. I think we'd all admit it's nice to have an uncomplicated, straightforward vegetable around. Green beans are a simple side that we can count on when we see it on our plate. With green beans, there are no questions, no summoning up our courage, because they taste like home.

Mother knew what she was doing when she served up green beans, snap beans or string beans time after time. Green beans are high in dietary fiber and a tasty source of vitamins A and C. Just make sure not to overcook them. For crisp, tender beans, lightly steam for a just few minutes to retain their nutrients.

In the garden, green beans also are highly desired and very beneficial. As a member of the legume family, green beans produce their own nitrogen and are sometimes grown by gardeners and farmers to improve soil quality. Early Native Americans grew a garden called "Three Sisters," composed of corn, beans and squash. The corn provided the structure on which the beans could climb, the squash provided shade from the sun to retain soil moisture, and the beans provided nutrients for them all.

Of course, when we say green bean we are talking about the pod, not the bean itself. And in this class of legumes there are many varieties, from the standard Kentucky Wonder pole bean and the Italian flat bean, to the haricot verts and wax beans (which are not green at all).

While the United States grows more green beans than any other country, they also are prevalent in dishes from many cuisines from around the world. Fresh, tender green beans are best in preparations that allow their bright flavor and crisp texture to shine, like my recipe for this delicious Green Bean, Tomato, Corn and Sweet Onion Salad.

GREEN BEAN SALAD

You can make this salad up to 24 hours ahead, making it the perfect dish for a busy week or a summertime party.

1/4 red onion or sweet onion, sliced thin
1/4 European cucumber, cut into thin sticks resembling the shape and size of green beans
1/2 pint grape tomatoes, halved
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1/2 lemon, juiced
1 teaspoon salt, plus 1 tablespoon for salting water
1 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon sugar or sugar substitute
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 pound fresh green beans, washed and trimmed
1 cup fresh corn kernels (1 ear) or 1 cup frozen corn kernels

1. Place onions, cucumber and tomato in a bowl. Dress salad with a generous drizzle of extra-virgin olive oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper, poultry seasoning, sugar and cayenne pepper. Toss to combine and set aside.

2. Meanwhile, bring 1/2-inch water to a boil and add the tablespoon of salt. Add green beans and corn, cover and steam for 3 or 4 minutes. Pour green beans and corn into a colander to drain. Cold-shock beans and corn by running under cold water; drain well. Add green beans and corn to the tomato salad and toss until well-combined. Serves 4 to 6.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

A RESOLUTION OF INTENTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF WEST SACRAMENTO TO ISSUE BONDS AND CALLING AN ELECTION TO SUBMIT THE PROPOSAL TO ISSUE THE BONDS TO THE QUALIFIED ELECTORS OF INFRASTRUCTURE FINANCING DISTRICT NO. 1 (BRIDGE DISTRICT AREA)

WHEREAS, the City Council, on June 4, 2014, adopted its Resolution 14-37 (the "Resolution of Formation) proposing to establish Infrastructure Financing District No. 1 (Bridge District Area) (the "District") pursuant to Chapter 2.8 of Part 1 of Division 2 of Title 5 of the California Government Code (commencing with Section 53395) (the "IFD Law") and adopting an infrastructure financing plan (the "Plan"); and

WHEREAS, the Plan provides that the District will have a duration of 30 years, as provided under current law, or 45 years, if the State Legislature extends the permitted duration; and

WHEREAS, the City Council has determined at this time to submit to the qualified electors of the District, the issuance of bonds for the District; and

WHEREAS, the City Clerk has concurred in the election date set forth herein.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the City Council of the City of West Sacramento that:

1. Recitals. The foregoing recitals are true and correct.

2. Description of Facilities to be Financed. The facilities to be financed by the proposed bonded indebtedness shall consist of those listed as facilities on Exhibit A, attached hereto and incorporated herein (the "Facilities").

4. Amount of Debt; Estimated Costs of Issuance. If the duration of the District is 30 years the estimated maximum principal amount of bonded indebtedness that the City would issue is $233 million. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF PAMELA STACEY FONG
CASE NUMBER PB14-95

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of PAMELA STACEY FONG aka PAM FONG:

A Petition for Probate has been filed by David W. Rice in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

The Petition for Probate requests that David W. Rice be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: July 16, 2014, at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. Two, Superior Court of California, County of Yolo, 725 Court St., Woodland CA 95695.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a "Request for Special Notice" (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A "Request for Special Notice" form is available from the court clerk.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code.
